Dear Dr. [Name of GP]:

Re: Subcutaneous Immune Globulin (SCIG) Home Infusion Therapy Training

Further to our earlier letter, this is to advise you that [Patient's/caregiver's name] has successfully undergone SCIG home infusion training and their subcutaneous infusion technique is satisfactory. [Patient's/caregiver's name] has given [number] infusions under supervision.

[Patient's/caregiver's name] is competent and confident about self-infusion and has been instructed about adverse reactions and their treatment. Localized site reactions are common when starting SCIG infusion therapy but decrease with repeated infusions. Although systemic adverse reactions are rare, they are more common when a patient has an untreated bacterial infection.

Should [patient's name] experience a SCIG adverse reaction, please promptly report it to:
[Name of immunologist and/or clinic nurse]
Telephone: [number]

We plan to see [patient's name] for follow-up at regular intervals, thus we will continue to share clinical responsibility with you.

Thank you for your ongoing support of [patient's name]'s SCIG home therapy. If you have any questions or concerns, please contact us.

Yours sincerely,

Immunologist
